

Ameniti Flow

Come home to yourself with every breath

3 breathing practices from Kundalini yoga - for calm, energy and balance. For a harder day, an important conversation, a break from the screen or the evening before sleep.

ALEKSANDRA MIGAŁA

FOR CALM

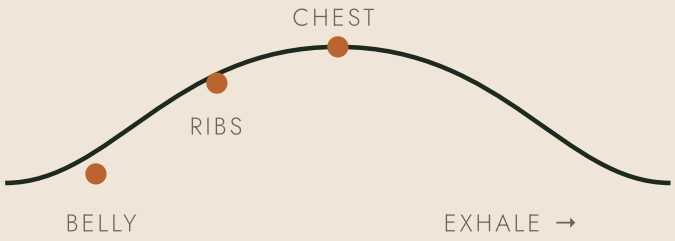

01

Long deep breathing

Kundalini yoga

The simplest and most essential breathing practice in Kundalini yoga. It slows the breath, calms the nervous system and helps you shift from "fight or flight" into rest within minutes.

1. Sit up straight - on a chair or cushion, with a long spine. Close your eyes.
2. Inhale through the nose - fill the belly first, then the ribs, and finally the chest.
3. Exhale through the nose - in reverse: chest, ribs, and finally gently draw the navel in.
4. Slow down - let each inhale and exhale grow longer. The breath should flow like a wave.

TIME

3-11 minutes

WHEN

When you feel tense or anxious, before an important meeting, after an intense day and before sleep.

BENEFITS

Quiets the mind, relaxes the body, brings in more oxygen and helps restore mental clarity.

> Tip: Place one hand on your belly and the other on your chest. You'll feel the breath move through the body like a wave - from bottom to top and back again.

02

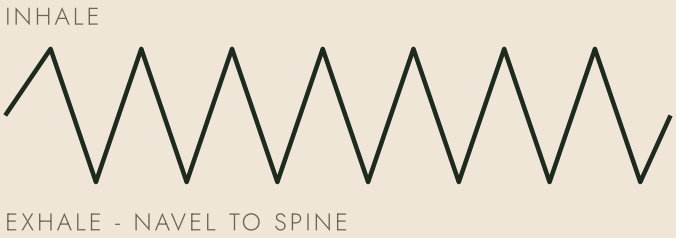

FOR ENERGY

Breath of fire

Kundalini yoga

A fast, rhythmic breath powered by the navel. It wakes up body and mind - like a natural coffee, without the crash an hour later.

1. Sit up straight - relax your shoulders and face, close your eyes.
2. Breathe only through the nose - quickly and rhythmically, about 2-3 breaths per second.
3. On the exhale - pull the navel firmly towards the spine.
4. On the inhale - relax the belly and let the air flow in by itself. Inhale and exhale are equal.

TIME

30 seconds to 3 minutes

WHEN

In the morning, during the afternoon slump, before demanding mental work. On an empty stomach. Not before sleep.

BENEFITS

Boosts energy, sharpens focus, warms the body and strengthens the core.

Note: Start with 30 seconds. If you feel dizzy, stop and return to calm breathing. Don't practise during pregnancy, menstruation, or with high blood pressure, heart conditions or epilepsy - choose long deep breathing instead.

FOR BALANCE

Alternate nostril breathing

Nadi Shodhana

Breathing through the left and right nostril in turn. It clears racing thoughts and restores inner balance when everything feels like "too much".

1. Prepare your hand - the right thumb closes the right nostril, the ring finger the left.
2. Close the right - take a slow inhale through the left nostril.
3. Close the left - exhale through the right, then inhale through the right.
4. Close the right - exhale through the left. That's one cycle. Continue at your own pace.

TIME

5-10 cycles
or 3 minutes

WHEN

Any time of day - when your thoughts are racing, during a screen break, before studying or sleep.

BENEFITS

Calms, balances emotions, improves focus and helps you feel more grounded.

> Tip: Don't force the breath or rush. If your nose is blocked, breathe calmly through both nostrils - the practice will still work.

Breathe. Flow.
Come back to yourself.

If you'd like to deepen your practice, join me for Kundalini yoga classes, breathwork sessions and workshops.

---

amenitiflow.com

These exercises are supportive and do not replace medical advice. Practise at your own pace and listen to your body.